Working Papers

Delivering Degrees: Educational Spillovers from Amazon’s Logistics Expansion. Working paper. [\[pdf copy\]](#)

- Estimates the causal effect of Amazon fulfillment center entry on local educational attainment using staggered entry timing across U.S. commuting zones from 2010 to 2023.
- Finds increases in bachelor’s and master’s degree attainment, with effects operating through household income gains and spillovers to information-intensive establishments and high-skill occupations.
- Winner, Best Second-Year Paper Award, Department of Economics, University of Pittsburgh (2026).

Sampling into Significance: How Random Are Results in Economics Research? With Sonia Ale, Lester Lusher, Huda Osman, and Jacob Stenstrom. [\[pdf copy\]](#)

- Studies how sampling variation shapes statistical significance by re-estimating results from top economics journals across independent resamples.
- Documents that statistical evidence can vary substantially even when the research design is held fixed.
