Skills

Methods: Causal inference and applied econometrics: staggered difference-in-differences (Callaway–Sant'Anna), event studies, synthetic difference-in-differences, panel data and time-series methods.
Data: Large-scale public and administrative data: American Community Survey, IPEDS, County Business Patterns, IRS migration data, Lightcast job postings; data cleaning, linkage, and visualization.
Software: R, Stata, Python, SAS 9.4 (Base Programming).

Working Papers

Warehouses and Diplomas: Amazon's Expansion and Local Educational Attainment [PDF]

- Estimates the effect of Amazon's logistics facility rollout on local human capital, exploiting the staggered timing of Amazon's entry into U.S. commuting zones between 2010 and 2024.
- Finds that Amazon's entry raised educational attainment, particularly bachelor's and master's degrees; more graduates moved to or stayed in treated areas, and students shifted from part-time to full-time enrollment.
- Shows that the effects reflect spillovers: Amazon's presence expanded skilled employment at other firms and raised local demand for college graduates.

Winner, Best Second-Year Paper Award, Department of Economics, University of Pittsburgh (2026).

When Samples Shape Significance [PDF]

with Sonia Ale, Lester Lusher, Huda Osman, and Jacob Stenstrom

- Replicates findings from 24 papers in top economics journals and re-estimates each result across 40 independent resamples drawn from the same data-generating process.
- Shows that sampling variation alone can overturn statistical significance even when the research design is held fixed.
